Aug. 10, 1877.

Thirty-two years ago, on the seventh day of August, six young fellows, five of whom "still live," were out on a day, came out here on a pleasure excursion. Here they met and instituted the "Veteran Cannon Association and Propeller Club." Can it be that the men with "frosty youth" I see around me are the same "frosty youth" that then were just entering on the prime of life? Every year since the formation of the club, nearly every year since, has been made an excursion on its birthday. In a few instances they have pitched their tents in other localities, but "Portland Head" the original camping ground, has been and probably will be the favorite place of resort. Its facilities of access, its mild and pleasant scenery, the fine opportunities it offers for picnicking sport, and, above all, the pleasant associations connected with the spot, are sufficient to lead the club to select the place in preference to all others for their annual visitation. Cowper somewhere says—

"By it a workman, it deserves some praise;
We love the place of our early days."

Previous to last year the time of starting for camp has been at about daybreak. Of late years, however, a reluctance to such an early start has been manifested by some of the members, who were apt to prove lagging. It was thought best, therefore, to change the time of starting to the afternoon preceding the anniversary. On the whole the change is a good one, as was the result of a set of fellows as ever started on a pleasure picnic.

"Jolly companions, every one!"

as the old song has it. They all seemed to be of the same sentiment, slightly altered, of an old writer:

"Well, there's yet one day of life before us;
And, whatso'er betide, we will enjoy it."

At a delightful ride we arrived at the old camp ground in good season, and were cordially welcomed by our friends. Capt. Stoughton, whose countenance was as pleasant to our sight as the light he highly kindles to the sea-farer on his lonely voyage. Pitching tents and preparing supper were the first things the engaged attendants. At a late hour we gathered around the well loaded table, and when I mention that Robinson was the presiding genius of the occasion, you will find that the quality and quantity of the entertainment we enjoyed. At a reasonable hour the club retired to rest, but I am sorry to say that your reporter got but little sleep.

Notwithstanding the nocturnal disturbance, by which our hands were kept busy, and only to witness a splendid sunrise. After breakfast, at 10 o'clock, the business meeting was held. Disputing the preliminary business, the following officers were elected for the ensuing year:—
